THE QUALITY AND STANDARDS OF THE CARE

On the basis of the evidence collected on this inspection:

The quality and standards of the care are satisfactory. The registered person meets the National Standards for under 8s day care and childminding.

WHAT SORT OF SETTING IS IT?

The childminder was registered in 2005. She lives with her husband and their two children aged seven and six years. The accommodation is a fourth floor flat in Maida Vale.

The childminder is registered to care for two children at any one time. There is one child currently on roll. There were no minded children present during the inspection. The living room is the main area used for childminding. Children are taken to local parks, playgrounds and other places of interest regularly.

The childminder is a member of the National Childminding Association.

THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE PROVISION

Helping children to be healthy

The provision is satisfactory.

The childminder maintains a very clean and well cared for family home. She demonstrates a clear understanding of how children's good health is promoted. The childminder describes how children will learn about their personal hygiene through practices in their normal daily routine, such as washing their hands before meals, and after using the toilet. She has systems in place to gather information from parents regarding children's medical and dietary needs. The childminder has completed a course on first aid emergency treatment for children and has procedures in place to respond appropriately in emergency situations.

The childminder has a good understanding of the benefits of healthy eating and promotes this well together with parents. The food given to children is nutritious and varied, and regular drinks are given throughout the day.

The childminder provides access to resources such as bikes, cars and balls at parks and playgroups. Planned routine visits to Paddington recreation ground, library and local drop-in groups ensures that children have opportunities to socialise and extend their physical skills.

Protecting children from harm or neglect and helping them stay safe

The provision is satisfactory.

The childminder demonstrates that she takes good practical precautions and sets realistic safety boundaries with children. She carries out regular safety checks in her home in order to minimise hazards.

The premises are safe and secure because the childminder ensures that all required safety equipment is in place and in working order. She provides a selection of safe equipment and resources that are suitable for children's ages and stages of development, which are maintained to a good standard.

The childminder demonstrates how children's welfare is safeguarded and promoted as she has all the required guidance and documents in place. She has basic knowledge of child protection procedures and plans to update her knowledge of Local Safeguarding Children guidance through further training. She states that she is confident about following the appropriate process should she have any concerns.

Helping children achieve well and enjoy what they do

The provision is satisfactory.

The childminder gave good examples of how to encourage children to enjoy their time spent with her. She demonstrates the ability to encourage children's learning by, for example, taking children to activities at local drop in groups, run for and by other childminder's. She describes a consistent, loving, routine that children are familiar with, which helps to create a secure environment.

The childminder talks about encouraging children's development through choosing from a selection of toys, books and activities from a local toy library. She understands the need to ensure toys and resources are rotated to maintain the children's interest and enhance their curiosity for learning. She plans to develop her resources and provide storage boxes so that children can easily access the toys. She knows how to develop children's interest in the outdoor environment, making very good use of Paddington recreation ground.

Helping children make a positive contribution

The provision is satisfactory.

The childminder discusses how she spends time getting to know the children well. She talks about how children learn about the world around them through the diverse local community. They are taken on outings to local drop-ins, parks and the library. The resources to promote disability awareness and equal opportunities are currently limited.

The childminder shows a sound knowledge of behaviour management, giving good examples of how she would approach a variety of situations for children of different ages. Children are reported to be consistently praised for their efforts and achievements.

The childminder has systems in place to gather and record information from parents about children's needs. She talks about how she shares information with parents, through the children's record books and in verbal discussion, on a daily basis. She is sensitive to the individual needs of families using her service and makes every effort to accommodate them.

Organisation

The organisation is satisfactory.

There were no minded children present during the inspection, through discussion, the childminder has shown that she remains suitably qualified to work as a childminder. She is committed to ensuring that children's well being and development is enhanced through planned activities and the information given to parents.

The home is well maintained, organised, and laid out to provide play opportunities for children. This warm and caring family environment will encourage children to feel at home and at ease. The parents' views are valued and systems are in place to share information.

All required documentation is in place. The childminder is keen to continue to update her training, to enhance her professional development and provide a positive impact on the overall learning, safety and wellbeing of the children. Overall, evidence suggests that the childminder meets the needs of the range of children for whom she provides.
