Introduction

This inspection was carried out by three additional inspectors. The inspectors visited 15 lessons and observed 10 teachers and teaching assistants. They held meetings with groups of pupils, members of the governing body, parents and carers, and staff. They observed the school's work, and looked at documentation relating to: attainment and the assessment of pupils' progress; school policies; the school's self-evaluation; minutes of governing body meetings; and the provision for safeguarding. They also looked at samples of pupils' work and the school development plan. They analysed 44 parental questionnaires and the responses from pupils and staff.

The inspection team reviewed many aspects of the school's work. It looked in detail at a number of key areas.

- Do pupils achieve at a consistent rate of progress in key subjects as they move through the school?
- What measures have been used to bring about any improvements in attendance rates?
- What is the effectiveness of the actions taken by school leaders to improve provision and track pupils' progress?

Information about the school

Oxley Primary is smaller than the average-sized primary school. Pupils come from a diverse mix of ethnic backgrounds. One third are of White British heritage and the rest are mostly Indian, Romany, White and Black Caribbean, and Pakistani. Although a small minority speak English as an additional language, an increasing number are at an early stage of learning English. The proportion of pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities is below average. The proportion of pupils known to be eligible for free school meals is well above the national average. A larger than average proportion of pupils join and leave the school other than at the normal times. The school provides a Nursery for children aged three years, prior to them transferring to the Reception class. There have been a number of staffing changes in the last two years, including the appointment of the headteacher in September 2009, the deputy headteacher in November 2009 and the leader of the Early Years Foundation Stage in September 2010. The staffing situation is now more stable. The school has recently gained a number of awards, including Activemark and national Healthy Schools status.

Main findings

Oxley Primary is a satisfactory school that provides a good standard of pastoral care. It is evident from the questionnaires completed by parents and carers, pupils and staff that most are proud to be part of the school. They recognise that it is a well-led, improving school. As one parent with a younger pupil in the school wrote, 'My son made good progress last year, his teacher was aware of his needs and helped him to be part of the class'.

The inclusive and caring environment nurtures pupils' personal and social skills well, leading them to develop a secure sense of right and wrong. They have a good understanding of how to keep themselves safe. They have well-rounded attitudes to living healthy lifestyles and behave well. Pupils enjoy much of what the school has to offer. They make a good contribution to the school and to the wider community. Pupils are involved in sporting activities, enjoy the singing in the local young persons' community and school choir. They particularly valued the opportunity to participate in the local Oscar ceremony that celebrated excellence in the use of information and communication technology. Pupils willingly take on responsibilities and are keen to give their views on how the school could improve. The multicultural, multi-faith nature of the school and the opportunities to learn alongside pupils in the local secondary school help pupils to develop empathy and respect for others. They understand that there are others who face extreme challenges in their lives and regularly raise money for a range of good causes.

Pupils' achievement is satisfactory. Nonetheless, there is evidence that the development of systems to track how well pupils are doing, and actions taken to improve the quality of teaching and learning, are starting to have a positive impact on attainment and progress. Last year, almost half the pupils made better than expected progress and overall attainment in English and mathematics rose at the end of Year 2 and Year 6. The tracking system is not fully embedded, however, so it is not as effective as it could be in accelerating pupils' progress. Teaching is satisfactory, although a substantial proportion of good teaching was observed across the school during the inspection. There are many important strengths in teaching but procedures for sharing good practice in order to raise standards are underdeveloped. Partly as a result, teaching is not consistently strong enough to ensure that learning and progress are steady throughout the school. Sometimes, in teachers' attempts to make activities interesting and relevant, the focus on what pupils are meant to learn gets lost and the task itself is given too much importance. Questioning is not always used well enough to challenge pupils to recall and apply what they have learnt or to help them understand whether they have been successful. Data from the most recent assessments are used well to organise pupils into groups for literacy and mathematics lessons. However, planning does not always pay sufficient attention to the range of abilities that exist within the groups and some pupils are not challenged sufficiently.

The senior leaders are ambitious for the school and determined that pupils will reach their potential. Rigorous monitoring and honest self-evaluation mean that leaders have an accurate picture of what the school is doing well and a clear plan is in place to tackle the improvements that are needed in the future. The improvements to date demonstrate that the school has good capacity to sustain further improvement.

Up to 40% of the schools whose overall effectiveness is judged satisfactory may receive a monitoring visit by an Ofsted inspector before their next section 5 inspection.

What does the school need to do to improve further?

- Increase the proportion of good teaching in reading, writing and mathematics so that most pupils make good progress by ensuring that teachers consistently:
 - match activities closely to the learning needs of pupils of all abilities
 - keep lessons focused on what pupils are meant to learn rather than the activity they are doing
 - use questioning to encourage pupils to recall and apply their learning, and to help them understand what they are doing well and how they could improve.

- Implement plans to ensure that at least 80% of pupils achieve nationally expected levels or above in writing and mathematics by:
 - sharing existing good practice amongst the staff
 - fully embedding the assessment and tracking of pupils' literacy and numeracy skills.

Outcomes for individuals and groups of pupils3

Most children start school with skills below those expected for their age and often with very limited language skills. Pupils have positive attitudes to learning because they respond well to teachers' own enthusiasm in lessons and the good relationships they develop with their classes. Pupils are generally interested in what they are doing, listen attentively during whole-class sessions, get on with the tasks set for them and behave well. Overall, evidence from lessons seen during the inspection, monitoring over time and data show that the progress pupils make is improving and, over the last year, over half the pupils in Year 6 made good progress. The proportion of pupils who speak English as an additional language, and those from the many minority ethnic groups, who reach the expected level for their age is steadily increasing. This is because the school provides extra support for these pupils that is effective in helping them to learn. Pupils with special educational needs and/or disabilities make satisfactory progress because rigorous tracking identifies them early, so that they get the additional support they need in good time.

Attainment at the end of Year 6 is higher than it was two years ago. An improvement in test results in English has closed the gap between the school’s performance and that nationally and the proportion of pupils reaching the expected level was just above the national average in 2011. However, the pattern has not been one of steady increases over time. The school’s assessment data and observations of pupils at work during the inspection show that attainment is below that expected for their age for a proportion of the current Year 6 pupils. The school is confident that it can accelerate progress, through the use of extra support and enhancement sessions, and raise standards by the end of the school year.

How effective is the provision?

Teachers succeed in making learning interesting. They use information and communication technology well to support their whole-class teaching. This was seen when Year 6 pupils wrote about how different characters in Cinderella would express their feelings as the story unfolded and when Year 2 pupils checked their written number sentences that they had read from the white board. Techniques such as paired talk are used to actively involve all pupils in lessons. Over the last year, the school has focused on developing pupils’ understanding of how well they are doing and what the next steps are in their learning. In lessons, teachers tell pupils what they will be learning and emphasise links with previous lessons.

Over the last year, the school has reintroduced single age classes as a way of raising pupils' achievement and this has improved the curriculum. Pupils are taught specific skills, supported by visits to appropriate venues, which they then have to apply in extended writing sessions. This has had a positive impact on narrowing the gap between reading and writing across the school and improving the number of pupils who are on track to achieve the nationally expected level by the end of Year 6. The school provides good opportunities for pupils to develop their creativity and make meaningful links between subjects. It is too early to see the impact of recent improvements on attainment across the full age range, but feedback from pupils and staff show it is boosting pupils' enjoyment.

The school provides good support to pupils who, due to their specific circumstances, may be vulnerable and who encounter particular challenges which can be barriers to their learning and well-being. Staff identify pupils who are falling behind their targets and put in timely additional support. The school effectively matches additional support and care to their needs, for example by using one-to-one tuition or links with professional agencies, to get them back on track. Good care and support were observed at the well-attended breakfast club that encourages good attendance and establishes good preparedness for pupils' subsequent learning.

How effective are leadership and management?

The headteacher has brought energy, enthusiasm and high expectations of staff and pupils. She works effectively with her strong senior team and has raised the profile of subject leaders. In particular, she has rigorously tackled some previous weaknesses in teaching to ensure that it is consistently at least satisfactory. Staff are fully consulted over plans for improvement so that they are clear about what leaders and managers are trying to achieve. Professional development focused on key priorities and performance management ensures that staff across the school know exactly what their role is. As one teacher commented, 'I am proud to be part of the movement for improvement that is sweeping through our school.' A thread through all aspects of the school's work is its commitment to equality. Staff consider carefully how well different groups of pupils are doing and know which may need additional support. The promotion of community cohesion is good. Events such as the French day and the multi-faith festival celebrate the rich diversity within the local community and beyond. This explains why the pupils develop a good understanding of each other's backgrounds and why the school is such a cohesive and harmonious place. The school seeks the views of parents and carers to make sure it understands their particular needs. For example, in response to feedback, it has provided courses to explain the school's mathematics curriculum, and, for the parents and carers of the younger children, opportunities to hear the modelling of reading skills. This is enabling more parents and carers understand how they can support their children's learning.

Governance is satisfactory and the recently appointed Chair of the Governing Body demonstrates a passion for improvement. The governing body is recruiting widely to bring it up to full strength and its members bring the right mix of skills and experience. There is a growing core of governors who are developing their skills to ensure they are able to provide an increased level of support and challenge for senior leaders.

Safeguarding procedures are robust and are reviewed regularly. There are clear procedures for ensuring the safety of pupils, backed up by regular training for staff. Pupils feel they are safe in school, as do their parents and carers, and know that their views are taken into account. They appreciate that the school has good procedures to help them to learn how to keep themselves safe. For example, it offers road safety sessions conducted by the community police service, from which an officer is also a member of the governing body.

Early Years Foundation Stage

Inspection grades: 1 is outstanding, 2 is good, 3 is satisfactory, and 4 is inadequate

Please turn to the glossary for a description of the grades and inspection terms

Children get off to a satisfactory start in the Early Years Foundation Stage. Most start with skills below those expected for their age and often with very limited language. Over the time they are in the Nursery and Reception Years, children make satisfactory progress, and their skills are below average in reading and writing when they move to Year 1. Staff are led by an enthusiastic newly appointed leader, the impact of whose direction and support is not yet fully apparent. Staff training is closely linked to ensuring the well-being of the children and improving the quality of learning and development. For example, staff have had specific training to develop children’s talking and reading skills and how to achieve a balance between child-initiated and adult-led activities. All of these newly acquired skills are being implemented, but it is too soon for the impact of this to be evident in children’s consistent outcomes in literacy and personal development.

Staff work very hard to include and involve all children and their families. Closer links with new families are leading to a better understanding of how parents and carers can support their children as they start school. Parents and carers are made to feel welcome when they arrive and are encouraged to stay, particularly in a child’s first days. As a result, children are settled and happy. Daily routines help the children to feel secure. They form good relationships with the adults who support them, particularly their key worker. They learn to keep themselves safe and healthy from an early age and begin to develop an awareness of the needs and feelings of others. Activities are planned to meet individual needs, taking into account children’s interests and preferences based on observations of them at play and listening to what they and their parents and carers say. The location of classes gives children in the Nursery and Reception good access to outside areas. Children particularly enjoy the opportunities they have to learn and play in the newly developed areas that have bridges and platforms on the grassed areas among the trees.

Staff are well qualified and have a good understanding of children’s development. They are developing ways to keep parents and carers fully informed with daily records of their children’s day. Throughout the day, children are offered stimulating play opportunities across all areas of learning both in the bright, airy inside area and in the well-fenced, soft-surfaced outdoor area. There is a strong focus on children’s well-being and ensuring a safe environment for their learning and development.

Views of parents and carers

There was a low response by parents and carers to the questionnaire. The very large majority who returned the questionnaire said that overall they were happy with their children's experience at Oxley Primary. Parents and carers confirm that their children enjoy school, that their children are safe and are helped to have a healthy lifestyle. Most parents and carers believe that teaching is good and that their child is making sufficient progress. The inspection found that these aspects are improving but are not yet consistently good. A very small minority felt that behaviour is not managed effectively. Inspectors found that behaviour is good, both in and outside the classroom, as a result of staff's adherence to the newly introduced behaviour policy. A similar small proportion of parents and carers felt that the school does not take notice of parental suggestions and concerns and, as a result, the school has plans to communicate more widely and more regularly. Senior leaders accept that there has been insufficient dialogue with parents and carers to share their vision for school improvement.

Responses from parents and carers to Ofsted’s questionnaire

Ofsted invited all the registered parents and carers of pupils registered at Oxley Primary School to complete a questionnaire about their views of the school.

In the questionnaire, parents and carers were asked to record how strongly they agreed with 13 statements about the school.

The inspection team received 44 completed questionnaires by the end of the on-site inspection. In total, there are 217 pupils registered at the school.

The table above summarises the responses that parents and carers made to each statement. The percentages indicate the proportion of parents and carers giving that response out of the total number of completed questionnaires. Where one or more parents and carers chose not to answer a particular question, the percentages will not add up to 100%.

Glossary

What inspection judgements mean

Grade	Judgement	Description
Grade 1	Outstanding	These features are highly effective. An outstanding school provides exceptionally well for all its pupils' needs.
Grade 2	Good	These are very positive features of a school. A school that is good is serving its pupils well.
Grade 3	Satisfactory	These features are of reasonable quality. A satisfactory school is providing adequately for its pupils.
Grade 4	Inadequate	These features are not of an acceptable standard. An inadequate school needs to make significant improvement in order to meet the needs of its pupils. Ofsted inspectors will make further visits until it improves.

New school inspection arrangements were introduced on 1 September 2009. This means that inspectors now make some additional judgements that were not made previously.

The data in the table above are for the period 1 September 2010 to 08 April 2011 and are consistent with the latest published official statistics about maintained school inspection outcomes (see www.ofsted.gov.uk).

The sample of schools inspected during 2010/11 was not representative of all schools nationally, as weaker schools are inspected more frequently than good or outstanding schools.

Percentages are rounded and do not always add exactly to 100.

Sixth form figures reflect the judgements made for the overall effectiveness of the sixth form in secondary schools, special schools and pupil referral units.

Common terminology used by inspectors

Achievement:	the progress and success of a pupil in their learning, development or training.
Attainment:	the standard of the pupils' work shown by test and examination results and in lessons.
Capacity to improve:	the proven ability of the school to continue improving. Inspectors base this judgement on what the school has accomplished so far and on the quality of its systems to maintain improvement.
Leadership and management:	the contribution of all the staff with responsibilities, not just the headteacher, to identifying priorities, directing and motivating staff and running the school.
Learning:	how well pupils acquire knowledge, develop their understanding, learn and practise skills and are developing their competence as learners.
Overall effectiveness:	inspectors form a judgement on a school's overall effectiveness based on the findings from their inspection of the school. The following judgements, in particular, influence what the overall effectiveness judgement will be. <ul style="list-style-type: none">■ The school's capacity for sustained improvement.■ Outcomes for individuals and groups of pupils.■ The quality of teaching.■ The extent to which the curriculum meets pupils' needs, including, where relevant, through partnerships.■ The effectiveness of care, guidance and support.
Progress:	the rate at which pupils are learning in lessons and over longer periods of time. It is often measured by comparing the pupils' attainment at the end of a key stage with their attainment when they started.

This letter is provided for the school, parents and carers to share with their children. It describes Ofsted's main findings from the inspection of their school.

Dear Pupils

Inspection of Oxley Primary School, Wolverhampton, WV10 9TR

It was lovely to meet you when my colleagues and I came to your school. Thank you very much to all of you who spoke to us in lessons, around the school and in the special meetings we had. We know that your school takes your views seriously and so do we. We have judged that your school is satisfactory. It is definitely improving and some things it does are good. These are some of the things that we found.

- The headteacher and the other staff lead the school well. They know what it does well and what could be better.
- All the adults in the school work hard to care for you and make sure that you are safe.
- The youngest children get off to a satisfactory start.
- You enjoy learning and work hard because lessons are interesting.
- You behave well in class and around school.

Your headteacher and her staff are determined to make Oxley Primary a better school and to make sure you achieve as well as you can. We discussed with them the most important things they need to do and we have said that they should:

- improve the proportion of good teaching so that most of you make good progress
- make sure that most of you reach the nationally expected level for your age in writing and mathematics.

You can help by always doing your best and attending regularly.

Yours sincerely

Andrew Stafford
Lead inspector
