Inspection judgements

The achievement of pupils

is outstanding

- Children enter the school with a broad range of knowledge, understanding and skills but overall, most year groups enter with attainment expected for their age.
- The two-year-olds get off to a very good start and integrate well with the older children.
- High-quality teaching and an exciting range of learning activities contribute to children's rapid progress in all areas of learning. By the end of the Nursery, children's attainment is securely above that expected for their age.
- All groups of children make exceptional progress. Disabled children and those who have special educational needs make outstanding progress because of the well-planned support they receive.
- The learning of the most-able children is successfully extended through more demanding activities and tasks. They rise to the challenges set.
- Children's communication and language skills develop extremely well because of the strong emphasis that adults place on these areas. For example, children made exceptional progress in 'acting out' Goldilocks and the Three Bears. Adults created a really good setting with furniture, props and utensils. The children chose the characters they wanted to be, dressed up in appropriate costumes and practised their speaking parts. They used animation and expression to great effect.
- Those at an early stage of learning English receive effective support, and their progress is carefully checked. Most make rapid gains in acquiring and using English.
- Children thoroughly enjoy the wide range of attractive books available. They are attentive and enthusiastic at story time and show a very clear understanding of characters and the events in the stories.
- Children make very good progress in mark-making and early writing skills because they are provided with plenty of opportunities to practise using different writing implements. The most able write imaginative stories about animals in spring.
- In mathematics, children use a range of learning resources to develop counting skills and to solve problems. More-able children work with large numbers and identify numbers which are more or less than a given number.
- Children make exceptional progress in physical development as they practise balancing, climbing and different forms of travel. One small group developed their throwing skills well, as they threw objects into a box from a set distance with increasing accuracy. With help, they recorded their results.
- In their understanding of the world, children make outstanding progress. For example, after viewing some interesting photographs of castles, children were inspired to design their own, using wooden blocks. They worked well in creating a secure structure.
- Children make outstanding progress in creative development and expressive arts. In a successful painting activity in the garden, children explored mixing paints to create a deep pink, the same colour as the blossom on the ornamental cherry tree.

The quality of teaching

is outstanding

- High-quality teaching is a key factor contributing to children's exceptional progress. Teaching is enthusiastic, imaginative and inspirational. Parents and carers reported to the inspector, 'Teaching is brilliant.'
- All adults create a very positive climate for learning and promote children's spiritual, moral, social and cultural development exceptionally well. As a result, children grow in confidence, are enthusiastic learners and relate extremely well to others.
- Adults expect the children to do their best, participate and 'have a go'. The children respond to these high expectations with determination and enthusiasm.

- Adults possess a secure understanding of the requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage Framework and how children of this age learn. They use this expertise well in planning learning activities.
- Excellent use is made of the well-organised indoor and outdoor accommodation. Outdoor learning activities in the attractive garden setting are particularly interesting.
- Teachers use the information about children's attainment to plan lessons and children's learning. The stimulating activities inside and outside the classroom are demanding and set at the right level for children's different abilities. These engage the children's interest and they make rapid gains in acquiring new knowledge, deepening their understanding and developing skills.
- The teaching of essential skills is effective. Adults are good role models for reading, and successfully promote children's knowledge and understanding of letters and the sounds they make. Adults use practical learning resources well to promote children's knowledge and skills in mathematics.
- There are good opportunities provided to promote children's speaking skills. Adults use questioning and prompting to promote children's talk and for them to express their ideas. Most of the questioning is of a high calibre and has a positive impact on children's learning. At times, the questioning falls below this high standard and is less successful in engaging children and in drawing out their thoughts and ideas.
- Overall, there is an effective blend of adult-led activities and those chosen by the children. Children have many opportunities to explore, be imaginative and learn independently. In the main, adults are skilled at knowing when to allow children to learn on their own and when to intervene and provide guidance and support. Just occasionally, opportunities are missed to intervene and provide suitable guidance to move children's learning on.
- Children are strongly encouraged to talk about their learning and have a say in the activities they choose. Each child has a memory book, a clear record of their learning with photos and samples of work. Adults include careful notes of children's thoughts and views.

The behaviour and safety of pupils are outstanding

- The parents and carers who completed the online survey and those that spoke to the inspector were unanimously very positive about children's behaviour and safety. Furthermore, they strongly agreed that their children were happy at school and well looked after.
- Children make outstanding progress in their personal, social and emotional development. This is because of the school's extremely positive and welcoming atmosphere and the high-quality relationships which adults establish with children.
- Children grow in confidence, are eager to try new things and to participate in the range of indoor and outdoor learning adventures.
- They learn and play together extremely well. Children take turns with others and consider others' ideas and suggestions. They form very positive relationships with adults and their peers.
- Behaviour is mostly outstanding and this contributes well to children's high-quality learning. The very few children with behaviour issues are skilfully managed and supported by adults.
- The school's clear records of incidents indicate that behaviour and safety are typically outstanding over time.
- Children are extremely keen to come to school because it is such a stimulating place to learn. The vast majority of parents and carers ensure that their children attend regularly and arrive on time.

The leadership and management are outstanding

- The Nursery and Children's Centre continue to be extremely well led and managed, and this results in high-quality teaching, exceptional care and outstanding outcomes for children.
- The established and experienced headteacher provides strong leadership and educational direction. The school aims to, and succeeds in being, a centre of excellence in early childhood education. All policies and actions are driven by the interests of the child. All staff and governors share these key principles and values.
- The headteacher, deputy headteacher and family service manager and staff all work extremely well together. Teamwork is strong and all staff show determination in doing the very best for children and their families.
- Through clear analysis and checking, leaders, staff and governors have a clear overview of the school's performance. Successful action is taken to make any necessary improvements.
- Considerable emphasis is placed on providing high-quality teaching and exciting learning activities. There are very good procedures for assessing the performance of staff. Training and development are well linked to the school's improvement priorities. A number of staff have, or are, pursuing higher degrees in Early Years education.
- The local authority provides good support and has clear knowledge of the school. Effective use is also made of an external adviser. Both the local authority and external adviser make a valuable contribution to the school's continuous drive for improvement.
- Children from a range backgrounds and cultures learn and develop in an extremely harmonious community. All children, regardless of ability, background, needs or race are highly valued as a unique individual. There is no place for discrimination of any form at Balham and all children have access to the activities offered.
- The school has been particularly successful in engaging with and supporting its parents and carers. They are extremely satisfied with the care and education provided for their children. They are especially pleased with the leadership and management of the organisation, children's sense of enjoyment, safety and the information provided. Their many comments included: 'Fabulous nursery', 'Children thrive here' and 'Staff really care for the children'.
- The Children's Centre and Nursery work closely with other agencies in order to provide children and families with the guidance and support they need. Some parents and carers remarked how well the school had helped them through difficulties.

The governance of the school:

- Governance is highly effective. Members of the governing body bring a broad range of expertise and skills to benefit the school. They are extremely supportive and some have remained on the governing body long after their children have left the Nursery. Governors have a clear knowledge and understanding of the school's performance and the community it serves. They receive detailed reports from the headteacher, local authority and an external adviser, so have an accurate view of teaching, learning and how well the school is doing. Governors are up to date with recent requirements for staff performance and development. They attend relevant training to further increase their effectiveness. Governors ensure that all safeguarding requirements are met.
