Information about the setting

Lomeshaye Village Day Nursery was registered in 2009 on the Early Years Register and the compulsory and voluntary parts of the Childcare Register. It is situated in a converted mill on the Lomeshaye Industrial Estate, Nelson, Lancashire and is privately owned. The nursery serves the local area and is accessible to all children. There is a fully enclosed area available for outdoor play.

The nursery employs 35 members of child care staff. Of these, 33 hold appropriate early years qualifications at level 3 and above. One member of staff holds Early Years Professional Status. The nursery opens Monday to Friday all year round. Sessions are from 7.30am until 6pm. Children attend for a variety of sessions.

There are currently 190 children attending who are within the early years age group. The nursery provides funded early education for two-, three- and four-year-old children. It supports a number of children with special needs and/or disabilities.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- consider further ways to enhance the already excellent dinner time practice to ensure that all opportunities, such as clearing plates, are used to support children's independence and self-reliance.

Inspection judgements

How well the early years provision meets the needs of the range of children who attend

The practitioners have an excellent knowledge of how children learn and develop. They help children to settle at the nursery by gathering a wealth of information about their interests and individual needs from the parents when they first join. From this information, they ensure that activities are shaped to meet the children's individual interests and learning needs. This supports the children to make very rapid progress in their learning towards the early learning goals. Regular and well-focussed observations of the children and precise assessments are used to plan for their individual next steps. Children's individual learning journey files provide a wealth of high quality information about what each child enjoys and can do.

Parents fully participate in their children's learning through sharing photos and regularly updating key workers about what their children enjoy and do outside of nursery. They look at their children's learning files and these are well received and valued by them. This is managed very effectively to provide the practitioners with a clear, precise and focussed approach to how they plan for each child.

Children are highly motivated and enthusiastic learners. They become engrossed in their play on their own, with friends and practitioners. Children become highly confident communicators. Practitioners working with babies and young children respond swiftly and sensitively to their non-verbal communications. They encourage children's language development as they listen carefully to them, mirror language very well and routinely give commentary as they play. As children begin to talk, practitioners take many opportunities to encourage and extend their language development by asking open-ended questions throughout the daily routine and as children engage in play.

Children are exceptionally curious and active learners, showing a high degree of confidence and enthusiasm. This is because practitioners make the nursery environment a fun place to be, where children are active participants in the learning process. The excellent use of both inside and outdoors areas enables the children to continually make choices in what they do. The exceedingly rich learning environment provides lots of experiences, which the children readily take part in. Older children become engrossed in projects, which support their understanding of mathematics. For example, two children in a group pick a number each, the children then put the larger number in their head and the smaller number on their fingers. They then start counting starting from the larger number, on to their fingers, to get a total. This type of activity results in children listening attentively to what others say, responding appropriately, whilst introducing the concept of adding.

Babies show contentment because the practitioners give high levels of attention to their personal care routines and their need to explore. For example the very youngest babies are taken to the well-resourced sensory room to stimulate their curiosity and promote their confidence, to further explore and investigate a different environment. Displays of family photographs on 'Our Family Tree', in all units of the nursery provide a positive link with home for all children. In addition, photographs of children engaging in previous activities help them to recall past occasions and talk about what they did. This promotes their growing self-assurance.

Children benefit greatly from the exciting outdoor play area that is creatively enhanced in all areas of learning. Children develop their physical skills as they balance, jump and ride bikes and scooters. Children have access to two allotments that are within easy walking distance. They are able to learn about growing and harvesting a large variety of fruit and vegetables. Practitioners are supported by an expert who oversees the allotments and has extensive knowledge to share with the children about the plants that grow and environments they need. The children have access to polytunnels where they can experience the environment that is needed to grow tomatoes and grapes. Children enthusiastically dig to find potatoes and collect them. They discuss why the worms live in the soil. This develops their knowledge and understanding of the world. Excess harvest is shared with parents and the local community. For example, an abundance of plums were harvested and jam was made for the nursery. The excess was given to a local community group to help raise funds. Children concentrate when making marks and babble to practitioners when they are asked about their drawings, helping develop their listening and speaking skills. Children see print and numbers all around them. There are lots of games and activities to expertly promote problem solving. This fully extends children's growing understanding of mathematics through their daily play. Older children confidently attempt to write their names on their pictures, developing meaning to the marks that they make. The excellent selection of books, story sacks and various props, fully capture children's interest in storytelling.

Children's understanding of their own and others' cultures, beliefs and lifestyles is promoted well through activities and an extensive range of toys, resources, books and posters that reflect positive images of diversity. The practitioners are committed to providing an inclusive environment where everyone is welcome, valued and respected. Children understand about different festivals and cultures and play with multicultural toys. In this way, they learn about similarities and differences between people and their diverse backgrounds.

Children have numerous opportunities to use technology, as they competently and independently use the computer, printer and various programmable toys. Due to the excellent range of activities and learning opportunities available to the children, they are prepared extremely well in their readiness for school.

The contribution of the early years provision to the well-being of children

Children thrive in this welcoming, dynamic and vibrant nursery. They enjoy extremely secure and warm relationships with their key persons and the staff team as a whole. Children's individual needs are very well known because the practitioners work extremely closely with parents. This approach ensures a smooth move between home and nursery resulting in children settling easily and happily. The children are extremely well behaved and thrive on the individual attention received from the practitioners, who consistently boost their confidence and self-esteem. Practitioners are very accomplished in recognising the uniqueness of each child and providing for their individual needs and interests. Babies are secure and confident to explore their surroundings, safe in the knowledge they have the supportive and nurturing practitioner who have high expectations. They form close attachments to them and enjoy cuddles, as they listen to music or explore the texture of the natural objects in the treasure baskets. They look for reassurance as they explore the foam in the activity tray, making marks, squeezing it through their fingers and exploring it with their mouth. Practitioners provide consistently high levels of praise and encouragement for children to try new activities and develop their independence. For example by giving them appropriate responsibility to undertake, such as helping to tidy up.

Children develop excellent self-care skills and are aware of the importance of following good hygiene practices. They are becoming competent in managing their personal needs relative to their ages. For example, they are learning to wash their hands before snack and dinner. They do this spontaneously, often without having to be reminded by the practitioners. Children have an excellent understanding of the importance of healthy lifestyles. They help themselves to drinking water when they are thirsty and are offered a range of healthy snacks of fresh fruit and eat well-balanced and nutritious meals. For example, lunch is freshly home-made potato hash or cheese mash with green beans, some of which were grown on the allotment, followed by sponge and custard. Lunch time routine is extremely well organised where children independently select their own food and drink, although there is scope to enhance their self-reliance further by encouraging the younger children to tidy away.

Very good hygiene practices are adhered to when practitioners change children's nappies. They record routine information about nappy changes, sleep patterns and details of food eaten by the children, which is given to parents at the end of each day. This information in addition to the verbal feedback, ensures that parents are kept fully informed about their children's routines throughout the day.

Children independently make choices from an exceptional range of stimulating and exciting play equipment. There are exceptional opportunities for children to benefit from fresh air daily, as they have an abundance of opportunities to enjoy the outdoor environment in all weathers. For example, practitioners regularly take the children to the local supermarket, park and library as part of the nursery routine. This develops their understanding of the local community. The extremely varied and stimulating resources and the expert support provided by the practitioners equip children with excellent skills for the next stages in their learning and their move on to school.

The effectiveness of the leadership and management of the early years provision

The practitioners have an excellent knowledge of the learning and development requirements of the Statutory framework for the Early Years Foundation Stage. They continually evaluate and plan an inspiring range of activities and experiences that highly motivate and develop from the interest of the children. Their planning is based on their excellent knowledge of the areas of learning and of how children learn. The practitioners also have an excellent understanding of the safeguarding and welfare requirements of the Statutory framework for the Early Years Foundation Stage. The robust recruitment and vetting procedures undertaken by the manager help ensure that practitioners are suitable and safe to work with children. They are extremely well safeguarded as the practitioners make sure their welfare and safety is of the utmost priority at all times and in all situations. They demonstrate an excellent understanding of their roles and responsibilities to protect the children in their care and this is further supported by a meticulously maintained set of policies and procedures. The practitioners take highly effective steps to promote children's safety throughout the nursery and on outings. They complete extremely comprehensive risk assessments that are regularly reviewed and adapted, as and when required. Children have fun in their play and learning and are well supported by caring practitioners, who have excellent knowledge of how best children learn. Consequently, children are becoming independent and self-assured. Practitioners act as excellent role models and respond to children in a calm and polite manner. As a result, children are learning to treat others with respect and their behaviour, manners and social skills are exemplary. Children moving on to their next stage of learning have high self-esteem and present as inquisitive and independent learners.

The partnership with parents, other providers and external agencies involved in the children's care is outstanding. Parents and carers receive extensive information through policies, procedures, daily diaries, verbal discussion and children's progress records. Information displayed on the notice boards as well as a regular blog, newsletters, updated website, e-mail, provide an abundance of useful information to keep parents fully informed about their children and the nursery. Parents are consulted regularly through discussion and questionnaires about the service to help the practitioners consistently meet children's individual needs. Parents are highly complementary about the care and education their children receive. They comment upon the excellent care and range of activities provided, as well as the extremely good two-way flow of information.

Management and practitioners are highly motivated, enthusiastic, and are committed to the continuous development of their early years practice. They attend a significant number of training courses provided by the local authority and external agencies, and plan ahead to update their knowledge. There are excellent systems in place for monitoring and evaluating practice through appraisals and supervision. Peer assessments mean they can evaluate their practice frequently to make sure children receive high quality learning experiences. The excellent self-reflection on practice improves all aspects of the provision and demonstrates a strong drive to maintain the highest levels of achievement. The manager also regularly reviews children's progress by sampling learning journals to oversee the quality of assessment and planning for their individual learning needs. Robust attention to reviewing and updating all documentation and procedures ensures that all of the requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage are extraordinarily well met. Regular reflection and self-evaluation assist the practitioners in continuing to make improvements to an already outstanding service provided for the children and their families.
