The quality and standards of the early years provision

This provision is good

- All staff have a good knowledge and understanding of how children learn. This means that children are motivated and make good progress in this welcoming environment.
- Staff are good role models and treat children with kindness and respect. This ensures that children's behaviour is good throughout and they play happily with their peers.
- Very good partnerships with parents and the school ensures good continuity and consistency for children's learning and development needs.
- Very good safeguarding policies and procedures are fully understood and implemented by all staff. Consequently, children are well protected and kept safe from harm.

It is not yet outstanding because

- There is scope to enhance opportunities to promote diversity, so that children gain further knowledge and understanding about the social world around them.

Information about the setting

Sacred Heart Wasps was registered under the current ownership in 2008 on the Early Years Register and the compulsory and voluntary parts of the Childcare Register. It is one of several out of school clubs run by Woolston Wasps Link Club Limited and operates from the school hall in Sacred Heart primary school in Great Sankey, Warrington. Children have access to the school grounds for outdoor play.

The club is open five days a week from 7.45am to 8.45am and 3.15pm to 6pm, term time only. It accommodates children who attend the school. There are currently 10 children on roll aged from four to 11 years. Of these, five are within the early years age range. It employs two members of staff, both of whom hold early years qualifications at level 3. The club receives support from the local authority early years advisory team.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- enhance the range of resources and experiences offered to raise children's awareness of their similarities and differences and promote diversity.

Inspection judgements

How well the early years provision meets the needs of the range of children who attend

Children arrive at the after school club with eagerness and enthusiasm. They enjoy themselves and have fun playing in a warm, welcoming, learning environment. This is because staff have a secure knowledge of how children learn and ensure that the range of activities provided link closely to children's interests. In addition to this, staff gather good information from discussions with parents, school and the children on entry to the club. Staff make effective use of these discussions and their observations, to identify children's next steps in all required areas of learning. This information is used to inform weekly planning of the club, so that children make progress in their learning through their chosen play. Parents have opportunities to be involved in their children's learning and development through daily conversations with their child's key person as they drop off or collect their children.

Teaching is good and animated conversation between staff and children throughout the session successfully enhances their language development. Young children are confident to share their views and talk about the activities they enjoy. Children develop expressive language skills as they sit together and enjoy their snack. They talk with their friends and staff about activities they have enjoyed at school and about significant events in their lives, for example, birthdays and Christmas celebrations. Staff spend time with the youngest children, building their confidence. They interact effectively with children, extending their learning. Staff promote children's language development through role play, for example, as children pretend to be hairdressers and super heroes. Younger children enjoy exploring different toys and playing with older children to improve their social skills. There is a good balance of adult-led and child-initiated play and children have access to a range of resources and equipment in the learning environment. However, there are fewer activities and resources available to promote children's greater awareness of the wider diversities of society.

Children interact positively and confidently with staff and with their peers. Their communication and language skills are promoted well as staff use every opportunity to maximise interactions. For example, staff show how they talk to the children while they play, ask them questions and show them what to do during activities. An example of this was observed during craft activities when staff encouraged children to design their own Christmas cards and write their own messages inside their cards. These activities involved all children and staff differentiated language used, appropriate to each child's stage of development. In addition to this, staff commented on activities that young children participated in. For example, children were praised for singing so enthusiastically and remembering all of the words to Christmas songs that they are learning in school. This helps to improve children's knowledge and progress with their learning, while complementing the learning that takes place in school.

The contribution of the early years provision to the well-being of children

Staff demonstrate how they provide a caring environment and the children form secure attachments with their key person. Children are confident and feel safe in the club because the staff are nurturing and understand young children's needs very well. Therefore, children are confident to talk to them about what they are doing at school. Staff gather good information from parents about their child, so that their care needs are well met.

Parents' comment that their children are 'so happy here, that they don't want to come home'. This demonstrates that children feel safe and secure in the after school club. Staff act as good role models and work well as team to ensure children's safety and well-being is promoted at all times. For example, children understand how to keep themselves safe through practical daily routines and staff guidance. This results in children enjoying their experiences in the club and gain skills that support their learning at school. Children's behaviour is good. Staff provide clear and consistent boundaries and offer children gentle reminders as they play, such as taking turns and being kind to one another. Consequently, children play happily together. Children and staff sit as a group and enjoy the experience of eating their food together as they discuss their day and current interests.

Staff provide very healthy snacks and drinks for the children and discuss the benefits of eating healthy foods. Children talk about the healthy foods that they enjoy and demonstrate they understand about making healthy choices. For example, the club is involved with the 'Change for life programme', which encourages children to think about healthy 'swaps' with their food and exercise. Staff encourage children to be independent by serving themselves at snack time and helping to clear away afterwards.

The effectiveness of the leadership and management of the early years provision

Children's welfare is safeguarded well because the comprehensive policies and procedures are clearly understood and implemented by staff. For example, processes for recruiting, vetting and inducting new staff are rigorous and effective in ensuring that staff are suitable to work with children. The team are all very secure in their knowledge and understanding of child protection issues and are suitably trained. Staff understand their responsibilities to provide safe play environments for children. Children play in a secure, safe environment where staff complete daily safety checks and regularly review risk assessments to promote their welfare. Parents are well informed about the club's policies and procedures and exchange information with their child's key person each day. They hold the club in high regard and appreciate that management seek their views. They are impressed by the way that staff successfully complement children's day through play-based activities while on school premises. Parents spoken to on the day were very happy with the setting, describing the staff as 'fantastic and very welcoming' and that their children 'love coming to the setting and see it as a home-from-home'.

Overall, this is a strong and effective provision that provides a valuable service to working parents and a safe and fun environment for children. Leadership and management is very good because the management team demonstrate a strong commitment to improving the out of school club. The manager and staff are enthusiastic and nurturing, which benefits all of the children in their care. They understand their responsibility to meet the learning and development requirements by providing good care and a range of activities that complement the children's school day.

The manager works alongside her staff, gaining knowledge of what is working well and identifies areas for improvement. As a result, a good balance of adult-led and child-initiated activities are provided. Staff monitor the provision as a team during regular meetings and ensure that training needs for staff are met and this means that the skills of the staff match children's needs. The team demonstrates a strong capacity to sustain ongoing improvement and all actions raised at the last inspection have been well addressed. For example, the key person system is effectively implemented, so that children's needs are met. Staff work closely with parents, schools and external agencies to ensure that all children's learning and development needs are met, which contributes strongly to children's continuity of care and learning.
