The quality and standards of the early years provision

This provision is good

- Staff know children well and they use effective teaching skills, which means that all children make good progress given their starting points. As a result, children are well prepared for the next stage in learning.
- Staff's caring and sensitive manner helps children to form secure emotional attachments and develops their confidence. This builds a strong and secure base for children's increasing independence.
- Children's needs are effectively met by enthusiastic staff, who are supported well by the strong leadership and management team.
- Staff fully understand the arrangements for safeguarding. They are clear about the procedures if they have a concern about a child in their care, which means children are safeguarded.

It is not yet outstanding because

- There is scope to enhance younger children's literacy skills by developing a more print-rich environment.

Information about the setting

Little Blossoms Day Care Nursery was registered in 2013 and is on the Early Years Register and the compulsory and voluntary parts of the Childcare Register. It is a re-registration of an existing nursery and is situated in Cross Hills, near Keighley, West Yorkshire. The nursery serves the local area and is accessible to all children. It operates from one playroom in the basement, one playroom on the ground floor and one playroom on the upper floor. There is an enclosed area available for outdoor play. The provision employs 12 members of childcare staff, of whom nine hold appropriate early years qualifications. There are currently 60 children on roll, all of whom are in the early years group and attend for a variety of sessions. The nursery operates all year round from 7.30am to 6pm, Monday to Friday, except Bank Holidays and one week at Christmas. It provides funded early education for two-, three- and four-year-olds and supports children with special educational needs and/or disabilities.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- build on opportunities for younger children to develop their emerging literacy skills, for example, by providing an environment rich in print, both inside and outdoors.

Inspection judgements

How well the early years provision meets the needs of the range of children who attend

Staff have a good knowledge of how children learn and effectively promote and support children's development. They spend time assessing children's starting points and abilities through regular observation and completing individual development trackers. These observations form a good understanding for staff, enabling them to effectively plan and provide activities to challenge and engage children in their learning. Children benefit from individually planned activities, ensuring those with differing abilities and interests are catered for. Children make good progress in all areas of learning and are well prepared for their next stage of development and eventually school. Parents have access to, and contribute to, children's files, and staff share assessment information with parents on a termly basis.

There is a good mix of adult-led and child-initiated activities, enabling children to learn through a variety of rich resources. Babies have access to musical toys, shape sorters, a soft cosy cushion area and sensory play items, which enables them to freely learn through play and exploration. Older children have access to sand and water and they actively explore such media through their play. They share resources as they mix the sand and water together. The seven areas of learning have depth and breadth, both indoors and outdoors. Equipment is well organised, helping to effectively promote learning and development for all ages. Bright and interesting displays celebrate children's achievements and support further learning. For example, there are a variety of number and letter displays; as a result, older children are developing number names and language and showing an interest in print in the environment. However, there is scope to further enhance this for younger children so that they begin to learn that print carries meaning, which also helps them to identify what is available for them to choose from.

Staff communicate with children enthusiastically and this helps to promote their engagement and motivation in learning. They have a good knowledge of the Early Years Foundation Stage and are skilful at extending learning and providing opportunities for further development. For example, as pre-school children self-initiate doctors and nurses role play the member of staff provides them with additional resources, such as a clipboard, pen and first-aid kit. The children write prescriptions and apply bandages to each other. This activity is enhanced by an enthusiastic member of staff who uses good, open-ended questioning to engage the children in thinking critically and being active participants in their own learning. Communication development is promoted by staff who communicate consistently well with children, introducing new vocabulary as they speak. Children are also encouraged to communicate together and friendships are well established. Consequently, behaviour is exceptionally good, children play cooperatively together and are socially confident.

The contribution of the early years provision to the well-being of children

Children are happy, confident and independent in this warm, stimulating and friendly nursery. They have formed close attachments with staff and often seek out familiar adults for reassurance and support, should it be required. Staff effectively respond to children's physical and emotional needs, and as a result, they play comfortably and enthusiastically. Positive relationships are extended between parents and staff, reinforcing the emotional well-being of children. Staff greet and welcome children into the room, which ensures they feel valued and cared for. Parents comment that staff are 'friendly and welcoming', 'they love children' and that they 'feel at ease to leave their child'. Children arrive happily, wave goodbye to parents and quickly settle into their environment. Older children demonstrate high levels of independence and competently manage their own care needs. For example, children independently put on their own coats prior to going outside, put on aprons before craft activities and make choices about what they would like to do. Effective systems are in place to support children as they move rooms, such as discussions with new key persons and settling-in visits. Consequently, children experience continuity and consistency of care and learning. Settling-in procedures are flexible and communication with parents regarding children's needs and routines is well documented. As a result, children are well cared for by attentive and informed staff.

Children of all ages are exceptionally well behaved because staff expectations are consistently clear. For example, staff remind children, 'please listen to my instructions' and to use 'please' and 'thank you'. Clear behaviour expectations are reinforced; consequently, children show a secure level of understanding of the behavioural expectations in the nursery and behaviour is consistently good. Children are provided with a variety of healthy meals, which are prepared freshly on site by the nursery cook. They eat chopped pear at snack time and have access to drinking water throughout the day. Those who have special dietary requirements are safely managed and weaning babies are gradually introduced to a selection of new foods. As a result, children's good health is promoted by a balanced and nutritious menu.

Children manage their own hygiene needs well and fully understand the importance to wash their hands before meals, in order to maintain hygienic standards. Mealtimes are both a social and learning experience, and children anticipate their meals with excitement. For example, staff sit with children and engage them in conversation they talk about the food they are eating. As a result, children are developing their understanding of different food types and healthy eating. Children's understanding of safety is supported as they are encouraged to take appropriate risks. For example, children negotiate steps up and down the slide as staff sensitively support them. Risk taking is positively celebrated through genuine praise from staff, helping to support children's confidence and independence. Children have access to a variety of outdoor play equipment and enjoy playing on ride-on toys, bikes and the slide. The outdoor area provides children with plenty of room for movement. They have daily access to the outdoor area and have a wealth of opportunities to exercise, which helps them to learn about the importance of a healthy lifestyle.

The effectiveness of the leadership and management of the early years provision

The safety and welfare of all children is a high priority for staff and management. Procedures are well embedded and staff have a good knowledge and understanding of how to protect and safeguard children. Staff are fully aware of their safeguarding responsibilities and know what to do in the event of a concern about a child in their care. Risk assessments and monitoring of the environment ensure that the nursery is safe at all times. As a result, children access play and learning opportunities in a consistently safe environment. Staff are well deployed and children are effectively supervised, so ratios are met at all times. The management team complete robust recruitment procedures during the selection and employment of staff, including qualification checks, reference verification and their suitability to work with children. This means that children remain safe and protected. Staff's ongoing suitability is maintained by inductions, appraisals, training and observations of practice. Comprehensive procedures completed by management ensure that the nursery is a safe and happy environment.

The management team have a clear vision for the nursery. They are passionate, motivated and aspire to improve. This positive attitude translates to staff. As a result, teamwork is effective and there is a fully involved and committed staff team. Room leaders have regular meetings with management to discuss children, staff and nursery issues. Also staff meetings provide an arena for staff to contribute ideas. As a result, the manager is informed and able to closely monitor and evaluate the quality of practice and teaching. The nursery has a clear and effective development plan in place, identifying priorities for improvement, including contributions from parents and local authority advisers. The management team consult with parents through questionnaires and a suggestion box, to understand their views and inform actions to improve. This demonstrates they value parents' views and are responsive to their users.

Planning and assessment are clear and consistent, and tracking documentation enables staff and management to fully understand children's progress. Leadership procedures and practices for monitoring the quality of the nursery are effective, resulting in a cohesive team and consistent practices. A welcoming environment and positive relationships between parents and staff allow for plenty of informal discussions each day. Questionnaires and a comment box are used to seek the views of parents. Parents can access information through the parents' board. Effective working practices have been developed with local authority advisers and partnership working to share good practice with other providers. The management team works closely with the local schools to build secure transition links. The management team values and welcomes support from external agencies and recognises the importance of effective collaboration. Overall, the management team works well with others to create a welcoming and friendly nursery.
