Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is outstanding

- Children make rapid progress in their learning and development because the quality of teaching is outstanding. Staff expertly use the observation, assessment and planning process. This enables them to monitor children's progress and plan rich activities and experiences, which fully support children's needs, abilities and interests.
- Safeguarding children is of the highest priority in the setting. Managers and staff know how to respond quickly should they have any concerns about a child's welfare. This is because policies and procedures underpin the setting's high-quality daily practice. Consequently, children are protected from harm.
- Leadership and management are outstanding. The manager consults with staff and mothers to strive for ways to improve practice and make positive changes to the environment. This ensures that the setting consistently achieves the best possible outcomes for all children.
- Children are extremely confident and enthusiastic in the setting. Staff get to know them and their mothers very well from the start. Staff ensure that moves into and out of the setting are managed extremely sensitively. Consequently, children are exceptionally well prepared for the next stage in their learning.
- The highest priority is given to children's well-being and feelings of security. Excellent partnerships with mothers ensure that there is consistency in children's care and learning. This means that children's health and welfare are supported exceptionally well.
- Staff are excellent role models who display positive behaviour and good manners in their relationships with children, each other and mothers in the setting.

Inspection findings

How well the early years provision meets the needs of the range of children who attend. This is outstanding

The dynamic staff team work very well together to plan excellent activities based on the individual interests and needs of children. Staff expertly observe children in their play and learning. Mothers contribute by sharing vital information about children's learning and development. For example, they notice that their children are communicating by screaming and ask staff to support them in dealing with this unwanted behaviour. Staff and mothers work together and plan how they are going to respond positively. As a result, children are encouraged to say 'help me' or use the picture planning board to show what it is they want or need. Highly effective partnerships between staff and mothers means that children's needs are quickly identified and exceptionally well met. Staff provide a first-class language rich environment. They commentate as children play to extend their vocabulary. Highly-skilled staff use sign language as a result of training, which actively contributes to the outstanding quality of their teaching and children's learning.

The contribution of the early years provision to the well-being of children is outstanding

Children develop very secure emotional attachments to staff because they are highly sensitive to children's needs and fully promote their well-being. As a result, children are extremely confident and enthusiastic in the setting. A clear and well-established settling in process helps children to quickly adapt to their new environment. Staff ensure that children have access to daily fresh air and to the wider community. For example, staff take children on walks to the duck pond and the local farm. Staff also organise trips for mothers and their children, such as swimming and joining groups at the local children's centre. These activities support children's physical and social development exceedingly well. They also support the mothers' developing confidence. Children enjoy accessing a wide array of resources from the extremely rich and varied learning environment. They independently select resources and equipment from baskets and low shelves. However, children sometimes struggle to identify which treasure bag they want. This is because they are all the same colour and the labels are not at child height.

The effectiveness of the leadership and management of the early years provision is outstanding

Staff are extremely well qualified in their roles, as a result they have excellent knowledge and understanding of the Early Years Foundation Stage. The manager supports consistently high practice through regular team and supervision meetings. Staff are offered a wealth of continuous professional development opportunities, such as further training, liaising with other settings and working with the local authority adviser. The manager uses the expertise within her staff team to provide a wide variety of courses and play sessions. For example, mothers helped to design and create a mud kitchen using a range of easily accessible real-life resources. An inspiring movement and music course developed their understanding of the impact of early physical activity for children on their literacy skills.
