Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is inadequate

- The committee, manager and staff have a poor understanding of their responsibility to safeguard children's welfare. Unvetted staff are left to look after children unsupervised. Procedures for recruitment and to ensure staff's ongoing suitability are inadequate. Attendance, accident and medication records are not accurately maintained.
- Children's health and well-being are compromised. Staff administer medication without prior written consent, and fail to inform parents that they have done so. Staff use inappropriate methods of behaviour management, which damage children's emotional well-being. The play environment and resources are poorly maintained.
- The key-person system does not ensure that children's care and learning needs are met. Advice from professionals involved in children's care is not followed. Children with additional needs and those who are learning English as an additional language do not get the necessary support to make progress.
- The manager does not monitor teaching. Children get very little purposeful support from staff. The range of planned activities and assessment arrangements is poor. Children do not make the progress they should or gain the skills they need.
- The committee and manager have not identified the serious weaknesses in the provision. They also fail to meet requirements of the Childcare Register.

It has the following strengths

- Children enjoy opportunities to play outside.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is inadequate

Safeguarding is ineffective. Staff's safeguarding knowledge is poor, despite attending recent training. They fail to notice, or act on signs that children may be at risk of harm. The safeguarding policy and procedures are out of date. Not all the staff's suitability is assured through secure recruitment procedures, including Disclosure and Barring Service checks. The provider and manager have a poor understanding of their responsibility to ensure staff's ongoing suitability. Record keeping is poor. The manager does not work with staff to improve their teaching practice or discuss their concerns. Training is not used to good effect.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is inadequate

Despite their qualifications, the manager and staff do not have sufficient knowledge and understanding of how children learn. Planned group activities do not meet children's needs. Children are reluctant to join in, but staff often insist they do. Children are left to occupy themselves for long periods. Staff do not support children's communication and language development, including those who are learning English as an additional language. Children's individual progress is not securely assessed or supported. Parents, and others involved in children's learning, do not have an accurate picture of children's progress. Support for children with additional needs is ineffective and places these children at a disadvantage. The manager fails to ensure staff follow guidance from professionals involved in children's care.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are inadequate

The committee does not ensure the premises and resources are fit for purpose. Staff leave the main door open for children to play outdoors, but fail to act when children indicate they are cold. Children struggle to keep warm indoors. The carpet is soiled, and children play with broken or dirty toys. Staff do not build secure attachments with children. They make insensitive comments and treat children's work with poor regard. Poor behaviour management strategies have a negative impact on children's self-esteem. Staff isolate children from the group, without adequate explanation. Children's health needs are not met. Staff administer non-prescribed medication without written parental consent. Staff do not promote children's understanding of safety, healthy eating, or their independence skills. Children are poorly prepared for their future learning and school.

Outcomes for children are inadequate

Children, particularly those with additional needs and those who are learning English as an additional language, are not making expected levels of progress.
