Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is good

- Children enjoy spending time with the childminder. They build warm and trusting relationships with her and one another in a welcoming atmosphere.
- The childminder provides a safe and stimulating environment, where children are keen to take part in a broad range of interesting activities. She has a good understanding of how children learn through play, exploration and real-life experiences.
- Children make good progress. The childminder monitors children's development well, which helps her to quickly identify and address gaps in their learning.
- The childminder reflects on her practice regularly to improve children's experiences. For example, she plans to seek children's evaluations more effectively by supplying them with cameras to help capture their views of her provision.
- The childminder establishes effective partnerships with parents and other early years professionals, enabling her to meet children's individual needs well. Parents agree that their children are progressing well in their development.

It is not yet outstanding because:

- The childminder sometimes misses opportunities for children to hear and explore the names of shapes during their play and everyday activities.
- The childminder does not consistently help children learn accurate words when talking with them to further support their language skills.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- increase opportunities for children to extend their understanding of shapes
- make the most of opportunities to consistently use the correct version of words during children's activities to build on their vocabulary.

Inspection activities

- The inspector observed children's activities and the childminder's interaction with children in the home and garden.
- The inspector talked with the childminder about children's activities and their progress.
- The inspector looked at a sample of documents, which included the safeguarding policy and children's progress records.
- The inspector took account of parents' views, obtained in person and from the letters they had written.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is good

Safeguarding is effective. The childminder has a good understanding about child protection issues and the procedures to follow if she has concerns about a child. She keeps her knowledge up to date by regularly attending training. The childminder has successfully addressed the recommendations set at the last inspection, which has improved aspects of children's early reading skills, for example. She continues to develop her professional role. For instance, she has completed an early years degree, which has extended her knowledge of child development and learning. Parents appreciate the variety of activities the childminder provides and say that they are well informed of their children's progress.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is good

The childminder has a good understanding of how children develop and learn. She plans a good variety of learning experiences linked to children's interests and real-life activities. For example, children confidently talked about picking blueberries and how they had to 'poke out their tongues' to show if they had eaten any. The childminder extended children's learning by involving them in making blueberry muffins, which involved weighing, measuring and mixing ingredients. The childminder is skilful in using unplanned events to build on what children know. For example, children looked at changes in the weather and recognised shadows; they considered appropriate clothes to wear.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are good

Children are happy and settled. The childminder gets to know children well as individuals. She requests detailed information from parents about children's activities at home to help her make them feel secure. Children behave well. They learn to take turns and consider others. The childminder praises children regularly, helping to boost their self-esteem and confidence. The childminder encourages healthy lifestyles well. For example, children have opportunities to be active with fresh air and exercise every day. They use various large apparatus and natural obstacles to take calculated risks and develop physical skills. The childminder teaches children about the importance of healthy eating and good routines for caring for their bodies.

Outcomes for children are good

All children make good progress. They learn skills that help them to prepare well for the next stage in their learning and starting school. For example, children are confident to make their needs known and relate well to other people. They develop increasing independence in caring for themselves, such as managing their own clothes. Children show an interest in the world around them, such as changes in nature and monitoring how things grow.
