Summary of key findings for parents and pupils

This is a school that requires improvement

- Leaders do not check closely enough that they are compliant with all of the independent school standards. During the inspection, leaders had to undertake additional work to meet some of these requirements. A very few of the independent school standards are not met, including in relation to the provision of first aid and fire safety.
- Leaders do not pay enough attention to detail when writing, reviewing and organising documentation.
- Leaders have not kept abreast of changes in legislation and guidance since the previous inspection.
- There are no arrangements for governance.
- The monitoring of the quality of education is informal, ad-hoc and not recorded.
- Too many pupils are persistently absent.

The school has the following strengths

- Despite the shortcomings in leadership and management, Treasure House provides a good quality of education. Personalised teaching is effective in meeting pupils' needs. As a result, pupils make good progress and achieve qualifications in a range of subjects.
- Safeguarding is effective. All staff are committed to keeping pupils safe and know what to do when concerns arise. Pupils confirm that they feel safe, and say they can be themselves at Treasure House.
- A hallmark of the school is the excellent relationships between pupils and staff.
- The school promotes pupils' spiritual, moral, social and cultural development well. Pupils regularly learn about people's differences and equality.
- Pupils are prepared well for their next steps. At the end of Year 11, the overwhelming majority proceeds to college placements, apprenticeships or employment.

Compliance with regulatory requirements

- The school must take action to meet the requirements of the schedule to The Education (Independent School Standards) Regulations 2014 and associated requirements. The details are listed in the full report.

Full report

What does the school need to do to improve further?

- Ensure that:
 - all the independent school standards are met consistently, by ensuring the arrangements for first aid provision and fire safety are suitable
 - leaders pay greater attention to detail in writing, reviewing and organising documentation in relation to compliance with the independent school standards and associated requirements
 - the new arrangements for governance are effective in improving the effectiveness of leadership and management
 - leaders and governors regularly check their compliance with, and understanding of, all of the independent school standards and keep abreast of changes in local and national guidance and legislation
 - leaders review the high levels of persistent absence and take further action to improve pupils' attendance
 - leaders strengthen their system for monitoring teachers so as to improve the quality of teaching further.
- The school must meet the independent school standards, as set out in the annex of this report.

Inspection judgements

Effectiveness of leadership and management

Requires improvement

- Leaders do not know all the independent school standards and have not been regularly checking compliance with them. Leaders were given time to correct multiple issues during the inspection. These included updating policies, ensuring website compliance and reviewing the single central register of pre-employment checks on staff.
- Leaders have not kept up with changes in legislation and guidance since the previous inspection and are operating in isolation, without support and challenge from any form of governance.
- Leaders' recording, reviewing and organisation of documentation lack rigour.
- Some of the independent school standards were met during the inspection, and a very few are not met. Those not met relate to weak arrangements for first-aid provision and some fire-safety concerns that required action, following the publication of an external fire risk assessment on the final day of the inspection. The inspector saw evidence during the inspection that all the concerns related to the unmet standards would be resolved with sufficient urgency.
- There is no formal system for monitoring the quality of teaching, learning and assessment. There is no formal appraisal process. However, leaders know their teachers very well, including the strengths and weaknesses in provision. They are right to evaluate the overall quality of teaching, learning and assessment as good, and work well with teachers to improve practice and further develop understanding of pupils' complex needs, and how to meet them in the classroom environment.
- The curriculum meets pupils' needs and includes all the required areas of learning. Pupils have a limited, but suitable, range of accredited options. These include GCSE qualifications in English language, mathematics, art, and design and technology; A Levels in English literature and art; and a number of entry-level and functional skills courses. There is a flexible approach to adapting the curriculum to meet pupils' individual needs. Pupils also participate in themed activity weeks, first-aid training and weekly physical education sessions, and they access weekly art therapy sessions. The quality of careers education is good. As a result, pupils are prepared well for their lives after Treasure House.
- Activities, trips, visits and assemblies enhance the curriculum and develop pupils' personal development. For example, pupils contribute to charity, including to a local food bank, and they learn from visiting speakers about managing their finances, the dangers of drug abuse and sexual health. They also visit the theatre and art galleries and engage in a range of workshops. These activities, alongside termly assemblies and a weekly personal, social, health and economic education programme, have a positive impact on pupils' spiritual, moral, social and cultural development. The school supports pupils actively and effectively to become respectful, open-minded and well-rounded citizens.
- Parents, carers and placing authorities are positive about the school. They emphasise the unique nature of the provision. One parent's experience was repeated by others: 'It is a calm environment that my child can cope with; she is getting an education which she would simply not have got if we hadn't found Treasure House.'

Governance

- There are no arrangements for governance.
- The formation of a governing body has been on the agenda for some time, but has never been realised. During the inspection, leaders successfully sought the agreement of two governors from local providers to join their new governing body.
- The intention is that the governors will support and challenge leaders to ensure consistent compliance with all of the independent school standards and associated requirements. This will include involvement in reviewing policies, analysing pupils' progress and checking that the school meets all the independent school standards.

Safeguarding

- The arrangements for safeguarding are effective.
- The school's culture of safeguarding its especially vulnerable pupils is strong. The systems to ensure pupils' safety are clear, robust and understood. Concerns are raised quickly, documented appropriately, and referred to external agencies, as required. Leaders take effective action to minimise risks to pupils. Suitable safeguarding training for all staff, including the two safeguarding leaders, is up to date.
- The school's safeguarding policy, after revisions during the inspection, reflects the most recent statutory guidance and is available on the school's website.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment

Good

- Pupils have positive and productive working relationships with the adults in the school. These relationships, in association with a patient, caring, 'stress-free' approach, enable pupils to feel comfortable and able to learn again. As a result, pupils successfully re-engage with education, following their typically disrupted educational histories.
- Teachers, who have secure subject knowledge in their areas of expertise, plan for pupils individually; all teaching is in very small groups or one to one. This level of support enables pupils to make up for lost time and make good progress across the curriculum, including in their core reading, writing and numeracy skills.
- The personalised approach ensures that all pupils' learning needs are met, including those of the most able and those with additional learning needs. Regular and impartial information, advice and guidance from an external careers adviser additionally helps to support pupils in being ready for their lives after Treasure House.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare

Requires improvement

Personal development and welfare

- The school's work to promote pupils' personal development and welfare requires improvement.
- Arrangements for the provision of first aid are weak. There is only one trained first aider and no appropriate medical room facility. Leaders acknowledge this is a problem, and made plans during the inspection to train all the staff in first aid in June 2018 and to develop a new medical room facility.

- Pupils confirm that they feel and are safe at Treasure House. They say they can be themselves, and know they can express themselves freely. The positive relationships between pupils and staff, and between pupils, are central to the school's success and help to facilitate pupils' personal and social development.
- Pupils learn about how to keep themselves safe and where to seek support, including in relation to online safety, sexual exploitation, drug abuse and self-harm.

Behaviour

- The behaviour of pupils requires improvement.
- The majority of pupils are persistently absent. As a result, attendance levels are well below national figures. There are a number of valid reasons for pupils' absence, such as anxiety and medical appointments, and pupils typically attend Treasure House more regularly than they did their previous schools. The school supports pupils and their families well, including by liaising with the relevant external agencies. However, leaders acknowledge that there is more to do to improve pupils' attendance to school.
- Pupils' conduct is excellent. Pupils are hard-working, respectful and tolerant, and are clear that they are at Treasure House to learn and achieve their qualifications.
- Incidents of bullying or serious misbehaviour are exceptionally rare. There have been no recent exclusions or incidents requiring physical intervention.

Outcomes for pupils

Good

- Pupils arrive with significant gaps in their education and, therefore, have typically low starting points.
- The school's information shows that pupils make good progress over time across the range of subjects. Pupils achieve good outcomes at GCSE, in functional skills and in other entry-level qualifications. Typically, these outcomes reflect good progress from pupils' starting points. Pupils progress and achieve especially well in art and design.
- Pupils make especially good progress socially, emotionally and in their personal development.
- The school prepares pupils well for their next steps. For example, of the Year 11 pupils who left the school in 2017, almost all are now in employment, successfully learning in college placements, or training and working as apprentices. The projected destinations for this year's cohort are similarly positive.
