Outcomes for children		Not Applicable

Summary of key findings for parents

The provision is good

- Children settle quickly, are happy and enjoy the time they spend at this friendly club.
- Staff provide children with a wide range of interesting activities that supports their learning at school. Staff interact well with them and join in with their play.
- Staff promote children's good behaviour well. They encourage them to be kind and listen to one another. This promotes good relationships across the club.
- Staff build positive relationships with parents and professionals in the school. They communicate effectively and this helps to promote continuity in children's care.
- The manager has a good understanding of her responsibilities. She seeks the views of children, parents and staff to help evaluate the club to make positive improvements.

It is not yet outstanding because:

- At times, children are not able to practise their self-help skills, such as during tea time when they are unable to manage the utensils provided.

What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- increase opportunities for children to enhance their self-help skills, such as during tea time.

Inspection activities

- The inspector spoke with the manager and deputy head of operations at convenient times during the session. She looked at relevant documentation and evidence of the suitability of staff working within the club.
- The inspector observed the activities indoors and outdoors and the interactions between staff and children.
- The inspector spoke with staff and children at appropriate times during the inspection.
- The inspector took into account the written views of parents.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of leadership and management is good

Safeguarding is effective. All staff understand their responsibility to keep children safe from harm. They have a good understanding of the reporting procedures if they have a concern in relation to the welfare of a child. Staff support children to understand how to keep themselves safe. For example, staff complete a group risk assessment as children arrive so that they understand and adhere to the safety rules of the club. Staff benefit from regular monitoring of their performance. This supports them to provide a safe and happy environment for children and to improve their practice. For example, staff have recently completed training to enhance their knowledge of managing positive behaviour. Partnerships with parents and the school are good. Staff have effective systems in place to ensure that information is passed on to parents. Parents are very happy with the service and speak highly of the staff.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is good

The well-qualified and experienced staff are committed to providing children with good quality-care and play experiences. Children enjoy group play. For example, they build structures with bricks, draw pictures and role play together. Older children include younger children in their play and support them with daily routines, such as setting the table for tea. Staff engage children in meaningful conversations as they ask them questions to prompt their thinking. For example, they ask children to describe their drawings and listen with great interest. Staff praise children for their achievements. This helps to build their self-confidence.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are good

All children, including those who have recently joined, arrive at the club happy and excited to play with their friends. They have built positive relationships with staff, who nurture their emotional needs well. Children are polite and well mannered. They listen to adults and their friends. For example, during group time children take turns to share their thoughts and ideas. Children are encouraged to be independent as they set up activities of their choice. Children enjoy their time in the outdoor area and have access to a range of activities that promotes their healthy lifestyles. Staff provide children with a range of healthy and nutritious snacks, such as fresh fruit.
