Summary of key findings

This provision does not meet requirements

- During the inspection, the childminder was able to respond adequately to scenarios and questions relating to her knowledge of what to do in a medical emergency. However, she has failed to renew her paediatric first-aid training as required, every three years. This is a breach of requirements of the early years foundation stage.
- The childminder demonstrates a secure overall understanding of how to safeguard children in her care. For example, she understands the possible indicators of abuse and knows how to make a timely referral in order to protect children. She is aware of her responsibilities in regard to the 'Prevent' duty guidance. The childminder knows how to help children and parents understand how to protect themselves when using social media or the internet.
- The childminder is aware of the importance of adhering to her policies, procedures and risk assessments to support children's health, safety and well-being effectively.
- Partnerships with parents and schools are established well. The childminder knows the importance of working collaboratively with others involved in children's care.
- The childminder is aware of how to promote positive behaviour and the importance of helping children to be respectful to others. For example, she encourages children to lead the way when making decisions together and when setting rules for the setting. She encourages children to use polite language when talking and listening to each other. She supports good table manners and encourages children to praise each other and understand each other's feelings.
- The childminder is aware of the benefits for children's personal development. She knows the importance of helping children to feel happy, safe and secure. She offers a range of toys, games and resources for children to enjoy before and after the school day. The childminder knows how to promote healthy lifestyles. For example, she offers children opportunities for outdoor physical play and exercise.

There were no children present when this inspection took place. The findings in this report are based on evidence gathered from discussions with those who care for the children and an inspection of the premises, equipment and relevant documentation. Where there are no children present, no judgement is made on the quality of the early years provision as there is no reliable evidence on which to assess its impact on children. The report states whether the provider continues to meet the requirements of registration.
