Registered provider: ROC Northwest

Full inspection

Inspected under the social care common inspection framework

Information about this children's home

The home is one of several owned and managed by a private company. The home provides care and support for up to five children who can no longer live at home.

There is a new manager in post who is not yet registered with Ofsted.

Ofsted last visited this setting on 16 September 2020 to carry out an assurance visit. The report is published on its website.

Inspection dates: 14 to 15 April 2021

Overall experiences and progress of children and young people, taking into account	inadequate
---	-------------------

How well children and young people are helped and protected	inadequate
---	------------

The effectiveness of leaders and managers	inadequate
---	------------

The children's home is not yet delivering good help and care for children and young people. However, there are no serious or widespread failures that result in their welfare not being safeguarded or promoted.

Date of last inspection: 19 February 2020

Overall judgement at last inspection: Good

Enforcement action since last inspection: There has been no enforcement action.

Inspection judgements

Overall experiences and progress of children and young people: inadequate

There have been numerous changes to the staff team, which means that children are not able to build and sustain positive relationships with staff. As a result, children will often go to the manager for support rather than staff, as she is the only consistent adult in the home.

Healthcare plans are poor, often missing vital information about children's health needs. For example, plans demonstrate that one child struggles to attend healthcare appointments and work is needed around this. Despite this being identified as an action, this has not taken place. Therefore, the child continues to refuse to attend appointments and is not receiving appropriate medical interventions.

In addition, plans do not include children's needs with regard to self-harm and mental health. As a result of these shortfalls, children often experience delays in having their health needs met.

Overall, care planning is poor and does not outline the specific and individual needs of each child. Plans mention children having a learning disability but not what support is in place for them or if staff are trained in this area. Plans are not individualised for each child, with all plans containing similar information. This blanket approach to recording does not celebrate the uniqueness of each child and means that they are not receiving care and support that meet their individual needs.

Direct worker sessions are not carried out on a regular basis. This means pertinent issues such as fire setting and the use of weapons are not discussed. This does not help children to reflect upon this type of behaviour or make progress while they are living at the home.

Support for children's education is inconsistent. One child has been out of education for some considerable time. Although the manager has worked with the placing authority and virtual head to source a college placement, this has been put on hold due to changes in the child's circumstances. Staff are not, however, providing the child with any alternative education in the interim period.

Another child is being tutored at home and is supported by staff to complete their online work, but this is for a minimal amount of time. Staff are not engaging children in additional educational activities, and consequently, children spend excessive amounts of time in the home playing on gaming consoles without planned activities.

Children are encouraged to carry out tasks to help them to develop life skills, but their engagement in these activities is inconsistent. One child spoke about their project to start a car washing business and how they had been washing the staff's cars as part of this. However, there are no plans as to what children should be doing during the day to support their learning.

Children were observed to enjoy positive relationships with staff. One child played happily on the games console while chatting to a new member of staff. Another child was eager to show inspectors his musical skills. Children said that they were 'ok'. Children said that they are listened to and staff are helping them to go to activities that they enjoy. One child spoke enthusiastically about joining a local football team.

Children are able to remain in contact with their families. Staff ensure that the children have the opportunities to talk to their families and to meet with them once the COVID-19 (coronavirus) restrictions are lifted.

How well children and young people are helped and protected: inadequate

When safeguarding issues have arisen, staff have failed to follow the agreed safety plans. Managers have reflected on this and have provided additional training to prevent a recurrence. Staff spoken to at this inspection, demonstrated that they have some understanding of child protection and safeguarding and who they would speak with to report any concerns.

A safeguarding concern was raised by a court professional in relation to the improper conduct of a senior member of staff. The records of the internal investigation into the matter are poor and do not identify any actions to address the concerns raised.

Children's risk management plans are inadequate. They do not identify all known risks to children or the strategies for staff to follow to reduce the risks. For example, staff have failed to carry out room searches in line with a child's safety plan, when there are known self-harm concerns. Similarly, the risk management plan for another child does not outline the strategies to manage the use of electrical items, when there are concerns about the child not sleeping at night. These shortfalls fail to adequately promote the health wellbeing and safety of children.

External doors and internal kitchen doors are locked with keys at night, restricting children's movement around their home. The practice of locking doors also means that the home is not following its own fire safety procedures, as children are unable to exit the home without the assistance of staff.

There has been a significant decrease in one child's episodes of going missing from home. Staff are aware of the action to take should a child be missing; this includes notifying British Transport Police and family members.

The effectiveness of leaders and managers: inadequate

The leadership and management of the home is poor. There have been numerous staffing changes in the home resulting in a lack of continuity of care for children. The manager has also worked additional shifts to reduce the number of temporary staff working in the home. However, as a consequence several managerial tasks have not been completed, such as the monitoring and review systems to make improvements in the home.

The home has failed to meet all of the requirements issued at the last inspection. These have been raised again following this inspection.

Senior managers have recently identified that the staff team was struggling. As a result, additional managerial oversight is being provided by the responsible individual and two registered managers from other homes in the company.

Only two staff currently hold an appropriate level 3 qualification. Other members of staff are continuing with their induction and probationary period. Staff training records are inaccurate, making it difficult to see what training staff have attended and if they have the necessary skills to meet the children's needs. Similarly, the workforce development plan is out of date.

Staff rotas are frequently changed at very short notice. On the day of inspection, staff arrived at work to be informed that they were on sleep-in duties that night, which they were unprepared for. This demonstrates poor managerial planning and adds to uncertainty for children.

Staff, including the new manager, have not received regular supervision. The manager's last recorded supervision was in June 2020. In addition, new staff at the home have not received fortnightly supervision in line with the organisation's policies and procedures. This lack of oversight means that areas of concern are not identified or acted on.

Record-keeping is inadequate. On many occasions, records and documentation fail to show the depth of discussions held with children to identify the actions that need to be taken.

Monitoring of the home is poor and has failed to identify areas of concern. Records and documentation are not current and do not reflect the needs of the children. One child's risk assessment has not been updated since October 2020 despite new areas of concern arising. It is unclear who has completed a number of records. On one occasion, the manager signed a physical intervention debrief record, when this had been completed by a senior manager in the organisation.

Impact risk assessments for children moving into the home are ineffective. They fail to consider the needs of children who are already living in the home as well as the needs of the child moving in. The responsible individual agreed that the assessment for one child did not demonstrate that the home was a suitable place for them to live, and that they should not have accepted the placement. This indicates that there are not only shortfalls with admission procedures for the organisation, but also a lack of thorough management oversight and understanding of children's needs.

What does the children's home need to do to improve?

Statutory requirements

This section sets out the actions that the registered person(s) must take to meet the Care Standards Act 2000, Children's Homes (England) Regulations 2015 and the 'Guide to the children's homes regulations including the quality standards'. ## Recommendations

- Staff should be familiar with the homes policies on record keeping and understand the importance of careful, objective and clear recording. Information about the child must always be recorded in a way that is helpful to them. The home's records on each child represent a significant contribution to their life history. ('Guide to the children's homes regulations including the quality standards', page 62, paragraphs 14.4, 14.5)

Information about this inspection

Inspectors have looked closely at the experiences and progress of children and young people, using the 'Social care common inspection framework'. This inspection was carried out under the Care Standards Act 2000 to assess the effectiveness of the service, how it meets the core functions of the service as set out in legislation, and to consider how well it complies with the Children's Homes (England) Regulations 2015 and the 'Guide to the children's homes regulations including the quality standards'.
