What is it like to attend this school?

RGS Dodderhill is a caring school where pupils thrive. Adults take the time to get to know each and every pupil very well. Teachers encourage and nurture pupils' individual talents and strengths. Pupils describe the school community as a 'family where everyone gets on'. They feel safe and valued and relish coming to school.

Leaders have high expectations for every child. They pay serious attention to ensuring pupils achieve their full potential and develop into confident young adults.

Pupils behave exceptionally well around the school and in class. They consistently show positive attitudes to their education. Pupils are polite, kind and respectful. They go out of their way to welcome visitors to their school. Everyone agrees that bullying is rare. If pupils fall out, they trust adults to help them resolve any issues quickly.

The school goes beyond the expected. There is an impressive range of extra-curricular activities. These are of the highest quality. They allow pupils to develop their talents and excel. They include learning to sail, hockey, choir, coding club and many, many more. Pupils appreciate these opportunities and make excellent use of them. They told inspectors 'there is something for everyone at Dodderhill'.

What does the school do well and what does it need to do better?

Leaders are ambitious for pupils. They ensure that all pupils, including those with special educational needs and/or disabilities (SEND), learn a broad range of subjects. Children, for instance, start to learn French in the early years.

Leaders plan most subjects logically so that pupils build knowledge step by step. For example, in music, children develop a strong sense of pulse in the early years before learning how to play rhythmic patterns in key stage 1. However, in a few subjects the curriculum is not as carefully sequenced. This means that some content which pupils learn in key stage 2 does not always prepare them fully for learning new concepts in key stage 3.

The school's provision for pupils with SEND is strong. Adults quickly identify pupils who may have additional needs and how best to support them. They share this information with teachers. Teachers use this information to help pupils well in lessons. In addition, leaders train staff in how to meet the needs of pupils with specific learning needs. Consequently, pupils with SEND are fully included in lessons and well supported.

Teachers know how to teach their subjects effectively. They check pupils' understanding well in lessons and use questions skilfully to spot pupils who may be stuck. This means that pupils who need help get it quickly. Teachers use a range of high-quality materials to support learning skilfully. For example, in mathematics, pupils use electronic devices to plot straight-line graphs. As a result, pupils can see the relationship between graphs and equations.

Leaders promote reading well. The school has several libraries. These are well stocked, bright and inviting. Teachers share their love of stories, poems, and other books with pupils. Pupils talk enthusiastically about the stories they have listened to and the books they are reading. Children in the nursery get off to a good start in reading. They enjoy taking part in singing rhymes and playing listening games. However, leaders have identified the need to improve the teaching of early reading further. By the time children start Year 1, nearly all pupils read confidently at an age-appropriate level. However, the approach to teaching younger children to read sometimes varies. This means that a few children do not consistently get the right support.

Pupils enjoy coming to school, are punctual and are rarely absent. They are highly motivated. Pupils show consistently positive attitudes to their education. They actively support the well-being of other pupils. For example, older pupils encourage younger children into school as they arrive in the morning. Lessons are free from disruption. Pupils told inspectors that this helps them learn because they 'can focus'. When pupils find work difficult, they persevere. They do not give up.

The school's work to promote pupils' personal development is exceptional. Staff know pupils very well. This means they provide opportunities for pupils that match their interests and talents. Leaders give careful thought about how to develop pupils' character. For example, they identified that some pupils would enjoy the chance to develop their independence. So, they arranged for these pupils to step out of their 'comfort zone', and study a qualification in sailing. Furthermore, the school offers meaningful opportunities for pupils to contribute positively to society. For instance, pupils in Year 5 and Year 6, are working on a project with a local care home. As part of the school's personal, social, health and economic (PSHE) curriculum, pupils learn about a wide range of careers. They study a range of different faiths and traditions. Leaders also ensure that pupils learn about age-appropriate healthy relationships in line with statutory guidance. Consequently, the PSHE curriculum prepares pupils well for their next steps and life in modern Britain.

The proprietor body has high expectations. During the pandemic, for instance, it ensured all pupils could study the school's curriculum at home. This allowed pupils to keep up with their learning. Parents greatly appreciated this. The proprietor body knows the school well. It regularly gathers the views of parents, pupils, carers, and staff. The proprietor body also receives helpful information about the school from the headteacher. It uses this information to hold school leaders to account. The proprietor body checks that the independent school standards are consistently met. The body fulfils its statutory duties well. For example, it ensures that the school complies with schedule 10 of the Equality Act 2010 and that the welfare requirements of the early years foundation stage are met. In addition, the safeguarding policy, that has regard to the latest government guidance, is published on the school's website.

Safeguarding

The arrangements for safeguarding are effective.

Leaders ensure that all staff know the signs that a pupil may need help or support. Staff pass on any concerns quickly. Strong relationships between pupils and staff mean that pupils feel confident to raise any worries with adults. When pupils need help, adults ensure they get it quickly.

Leaders are acutely aware of the potential risks facing pupils. They ensure that pupils get the information they need to help them keep safe. Pupils learn, for instance, how to protect themselves from potential harm when using the internet.

What does the school need to do to improve? (Information for the school and proprietor)

- Some teachers do not adopt the best approach when helping younger pupils who struggle with reading. Therefore, a few pupils do not get the most effective support they need to keep pace with the school's early reading curriculum. Leaders should ensure that all teachers of early reading have expert subject knowledge.
- In a few subjects, the curriculum is not yet sufficiently sequenced from the early years to Year 11. However, it is clear from the actions that leaders have already taken that they are in the process of bringing this about.
