Inspection judgements

Overall experiences and progress of children and young people: good

Children benefit from well-planned, highly individualised care that promotes their needs effectively. They enjoy positive relationships with the adults who care for them and provide them with stability and consistency in their lives.

Children benefit from a caring, supportive and nurturing environment that enables them to feel safe and secure. A social worker said, 'Staff have shown commitment and care to the children. I know from my regular visits that staff are very supportive.'

Children have access to the services that they need to ensure their good health and well-being. Staff provide advice and support on important health issues that helps children to lead and maintain a healthy lifestyle. Medical consent is obtained to ensure that staff are familiar with the health responsibilities that are delegated to them.

Staff have established strong partnerships with schools, social workers and other professionals to ensure that children benefit from the best possible help and all-round support. They educate children about risks. As a result, staff help children to keep themselves safe.

Staff have consistently high aspirations for children. They support them to attend school regularly and work tirelessly with the providers of their education to promote their educational achievement. A teacher said, '[The child's name] is making good progress in all subjects with excellent feedback from teachers. They have excellent punctuality, and always attends school well-presented.'

Staff actively support children to spend time with their friends and family. As a result, they help children to maintain meaningful relationships with the people that matter most to them. Staff also provide children with positive activities and encourage their interests and hobbies.

How well children and young people are helped and protected: good

The safety of children is consistently at the centre of staff's practice. Staff implement clear risk management plans effectively to promote the safety of children. They have a clear understanding of the specific needs and vulnerabilities of children. They review children's plans on a regular basis to ensure that any changes in behaviour are considered so that strategies to manage behaviour remain effective.

Children feel able to raise concerns with staff and the rights of children are promoted effectively. Staff are trained in child protection and are familiar with their safeguarding roles and responsibilities. Allegations of abuse are handled professionally, and significant incidents are reported to the appropriate authorities to ensure that children are protected and kept safe from harm.

Unsafe behaviours, such as, children going missing are managed effectively by staff. Staff actively look for children, if they are missing from the home, and work closely with the police to secure their safe return.

Staff are trained in de-escalation techniques and are skilled in anticipating incidents, so they can act quickly to prevent unsafe behaviours from escalating. The use of restraint is exceptionally rare. Restraint is only ever used as a last resort to protect children from harm. The use of consequences to manage unwanted behaviours are fair and proportionate.

Staff provide children with a homely and comfortable living environment. However, locks on the internal and external doors are not homely and can restrict children's movement when in use. Staff manage health and safety matters effectively. This ensures that a safe and hazard free environment is maintained for children.

The effectiveness of leaders and managers: good

The home is managed efficiently and effectively by a long-serving registered manager who is a visible and strong presence in the children's lives. Children benefit from a manager who demonstrates strong leadership of the day-to-day operations of the home.

Staff meet the aims and objectives, as outlined, in the home's statement of purpose. They have met the requirement and all recommendations from the last inspection.

Sufficient numbers of experienced, qualified and well-trained staff are employed to meet the specific needs of the children. Staff benefit from weekly team meetings that are focused on meeting the needs of children. A social worker said, 'Staff clearly know the children well.'

Staff receive regular performance related supervision. However, supervision is not consistently focused on staff's relationships with children or the progress and experiences they are having. Additionally, rotas for the home do not routinely include the hours that staff work on the rota.

The manager is an inspirational leader who provides staff with a clear sense of purpose and direction. They have high expectations of staff and lead the staff team by example. They make effective use of the monitoring activities to understand the strengths and weaknesses. They tackle shortfalls to secure continuing improvement in the care provided for children.
