Introduction

The inspection was carried out by one Additional Inspector, who evaluated the overall effectiveness of the school and particularly investigated the impact of measures taken to improve standards, any variation in provision between key stages, and pupils' attendance. Parts of some lessons were observed, parents' questionnaires and a sample of pupils' work were examined and school information, including self-evaluation, was scrutinised. The inspector found no evidence to suggest that the school's own assessments, as given in its self-evaluation, were not justified, and these have been included where appropriate in the report.

Description of the school

In this very large school, pupils come from diverse backgrounds. Around a third are White British, a third are from families of Pakistani origin, and other pupils come from a range of backgrounds. The proportion of pupils learning English as an additional language is high. An average proportion of pupils have learning difficulties or disabilities. These cover a wide range of difficulties, but the largest numbers are for dyslexia and for speech and language problems. The school operates across two sites which are about half a mile apart.

Overall effectiveness of the school

Grade: 2

Hamilton Primary is a good school and it is well led and managed. The school sums up its aims as 'Quality, Respect, Opportunity, Support, Improvement' and it has had considerable success in achieving them.

Parents strongly value the good quality of provision, and especially the good teaching that has delivered consistently above average standards in the Year 6 national tests. Parents appreciate that pupils achieve well in other subjects too. The school has a high reputation for the quality of its music provision; with a great many pupils involved in learning an instrument, singing and performing. During the inspection, pupils in Year 4 were busily preparing the opera they are putting together on the theme of safety and the urban environment. Standards have not been as high in the Year 2 assessments, with pupils generally achieving satisfactorily in Key Stage 1 and attaining average standards rather than building more strongly on the good progress made in the Foundation Stage. School leaders have identified this as key area for improvement and have begun to revise the Key Stage 1 curriculum to make it more interesting and engaging for the pupils. Pupils do not make as rapid a progress as they could in Years 1 and 2 because teachers do not always engage and actively involve them in lessons as effectively as in other year groups.

Pupils' personal, spiritual, moral, social and cultural development is outstanding. Pupils greatly enjoy school and they are often enthusiastic in lessons, particularly in Key Stage 2. Relationships throughout the school are excellent and pupils treat each other with respect. They celebrate the broad range of cultures represented in the school, and, as a result, the school works as a racially harmonious community. Pupils take a real pride in their school and the many responsibilities they take on within the school community, for example, as office monitors, manning the telephones at lunchtime, and as peer mediators, helping to resolve minor squabbles. Behaviour throughout the school is good and pupils confirm that they feel safe at school and have a very good understanding of how to keep safe.

A notable strength of Hamilton Primary is the opportunity offered to pupils by the exceptional range of extra-curricular activities. Parents voice particular appreciation for, as one commented, '...the amazing effort made to enrich children's learning'. The many music ensembles reflect the high profile given to this subject, but pupils also enjoy taking part in a wide range of sports, which, with their very good understanding of the need for a healthy diet, help to keep pupils active and healthy. Among the extensive range of clubs is the school's chess club, which has earned the school an impressive record, with pupils from Hamilton making up around half of the county chess teams for both nine and eleven-year-olds. Governors point out that the size of the school gives it greater opportunity than most primary schools to band pupils by ability and to offer specialist teaching in several subjects. The curriculum overall is good rather than better, however, because changes to move to more topic-based teaching in Key Stage 1 are too recent to have shown through significantly in terms of their impact on standards.

The support for pupils is good. Teaching assistants help those with dyslexia, language learning difficulties and the many pupils learning English as an additional language to make good progress. Welfare arrangements are robust. The school has built a very effective partnership with parents who, in turn, are very supportive both of the school and of their children's education. Several come in to school to help in class and many say how much they appreciate the help they have been given through mathematics evenings to bring them up to speed on the way the subject is taught so that they can help their children at home. Attendance rates are only average because some parents take family holidays in term time, despite the school's strong efforts to discourage this avoidable absence. Pupils benefit from good academic guidance through the targets they have, particularly with the introduction this year of 'Writing Passports' that help pupils to improve their work by setting out the next steps in their learning. Teachers' marking, however, does not always give pupils a clear enough steer on what they need to do to improve their work.

Although Hamilton Primary is successful, there is no sense of complacency from the headteacher, governors and leadership team. Based on careful monitoring of provision and analysis of pupils' progress, they have a very accurate picture both of the school's many strengths and of those aspects that could be better. Staff in this well run school strive for continued improvement, with some recent changes already having had a positive effect. The school's consistent track record of success show its good capacity for continued improvement.

Effectiveness of the Foundation Stage

Grade: 2

Parents reserve particular praise for the very good start their children get off to in the Foundation Stage. Several rightly comment on how their children are helped to quickly settle in 'as a result of the care given by teachers and other staff'. From a starting point that is broadly in line with the skills expected nationally of four-year-olds, children make good progress to reach above average standards by the end of the Reception Year in all areas of learning. They do especially well in their social development. As a parent explained, 'The school gently instils discipline without compromising creativity'.

What the school should do to improve further

- Ensure that all pupils are given activities that keep them interested and fully engaged, especially in Key Stage 1.
- Give pupils clear feedback through marking that guides them on what they need to do to improve their work.

Any complaints about the inspection or the report should be made following the procedures set out in the guidance 'Complaints about school inspection', which is available from Ofsted's website: www.ofsted.gov.uk.

Text from letter to pupils explaining the findings of the inspection

26 March 2008

Dear Pupils

Inspection of Hamilton Primary School, High Wycombe, HP13 6SG

Thank you for making me so welcome when I came to visit your school recently. I am writing to tell you what I found.

Hamilton is a good, well-run school - but you knew that because several of you told me that yourselves, and many of your parents said the same thing. You enjoy the super range of clubs and are very proud of the music that so many of you take part in.

You do well at the school because the teaching is good, but children in the infant classes do not do as well as in Foundation Stage and in Years 3 to 6. This is because children in these classes are not always given work that keeps them all as involved. The school is already rearranging activities in Years 1 and 2 to provide more interesting topic work, but I have asked them to make sure that all the children are given activities that keep them engaged.

I was pleased to see how well behaved you all are and how very well you all get on with each other. Everyone mixes together so well at Hamilton, whatever their background, and it is that that helps to make it such a happy place. Staff look after you well and help you to keep you and make you feel safe.

I was pleased to see how the Writing Passports had helped to improve your writing by giving you clear targets. Marking does not always give you such clear guidance, though. I have asked the school to look carefully at marking and make sure it is more consistent in giving you clear pointers on how to make your work better.

You can help too by continuing to work hard and do your best, and by asking teachers what you need to do to improve your work.

Best wishes,

Selwyn Ward

Lead Inspector
